

Abstract

The invention mediates between a fixed or mobile remote asset or resource and a network-facing interface for telemetry applications. For instance, vending 5 machines or other electronic devices may be monitored for stocking, power faults and other operation. Wired or wireless interfaces to those remote machines may report their operational condition to a server which translates the status information into a streamlined format, for instance via a Web page for login and viewing. Convenience and interoperability are enhanced.